Acceptable Use Policy

- Don't do anything stupid that annoys me or others.
- Follow the golden rule and we'll all get along.
- If you don't, I may start deleting stuff without warning, but nothing guarantees I will.

Privacy Policy

- I don't, and can't, provide you “privacy.”
- If you want information kept private, keep it in your own brain. It's not a secret anymore if you tell me.
- Don't ever type it into your computer, or mine.
- Any data you put into a computer (yours, mine, anyone's) should automatically be considered public information.
- Once information is entered (and stored) in a computer, a virus, trojan, hacker, corporation, or government can get it and make it public without your knowledge or prior consent.
- On the Internet, you are sending clearly readable information around the world over open links between numerous computers.
- People may be sniffing the traffic anywhere between your computer and mine.
- Your browser tells every website you visit (including mine) tons of information about you and your computer.
 - See for yourself at Browserspy
- Your ISP routinely sells lists of the sites you visit (called clickstream data) to third-parties without your knowledge.
- Many websites you go to secretly report your visit to their pages to google through google-analytics or adsense.
- Corporations and major governments are openly spying on all Internet traffic.
 - Imagine what they are doing in secret even after Wikileaks ...
- You don't have any privacy on any computer or the Internet, so don't expect any here.
- If you disagree with this privacy policy, the fault lies with you and your acceptance of current law and government.
 - The remedy for this state of affairs is up to you.
 - You might start with choosing a more privacy-respecting browser
